Nearly 20 years ago, Tamsin Calidas moved from London to a small Hebridean island. For more than a decade she lived close to the wilds, immersing herself in the sea each day and finding strength in the regenerative power of nature. Her book, I Am An Island, described her life living close to the elements and became a bestseller. Now, in a new hand-sewn and hand-bound book called A Wilder Voice, she presents her photographs of life on the island with words from her memoir.

Left each day the sea washes me smooth

Overleaf its infinitely simpler rhythms allow me to connect deeply to my instincts – they allow me to reach closer to the sky, the sun, the wind and the moon

Left the sheep are running rings around us

Below i learn to turn to the gentle and broken things in nature

Opposite top our breath clouds white as i rub her thick coat briskly with my chapped hand

Opposite below this breath calls with a different voice, like a strong flowing river or grasses swaying under the sky. like clear amber eyes seeking mine or dark hooves drumming the winter earth

▶ A Wilder Voice with words and photography by Tamsin Calidas is published in hardback by Hanbury Press. The book is hand-stitched and the cover is hand-screen printed on book cloth and is a limited edition of 300 copies. Price: £38.
